An Evening Echo.

All minds quote. Old and new make the warp and woof of every moment. There is no thread that is not a twist of these two strands. We quote not only books and prophets, but arts, sciences, religion, customs, and always, nay, we quote temples and houses, tables and chairs, by imitation. * * *—EMERSON.

Why was it there was not one of those old-time receptions to Bryan here? There is a reason and the Telegram would be glad for the Exposition to repeat the reason as given by many prominent Democrats here.

The edict has gone forth and there is to be no more free speech on the part of Democratic newspapers in this state. If the Fairmont Times and the Charleston Gazette have their way about it.

Theodore Roosevelt threw a bomb into the Democratic camp, when he declared a night or two ago in the most positive manner that he had had all the honor and good things that any American could wish for and that he had no aspiration to be President again. They begin to see the ex-President lining up for Taft's re-election, and it is little wonder the bomb excited them so much.

So soon after the selection of Senator Martin of Virginia to be party caucus chairman and floor leader for the Democrats in the United States Senate, to which William Jennings Bryan was opposed and for which Senator Clarence W. Watson voted, the Nebraska could scarcely say yesterday: "I am in the hands of my friends," or at least if he did say it, it is a ten to one shot he did not believe it.

Senator Bacon and other Democrats in the United States Senate express implicit confidence in President Taft's action in sending troops to the Mexican border and declare they believe absolutely that the President would do nothing in the Mexican situation that might tend to injure this country. They recognize the President as a patriot and do not hesitate to say so. Their firm stand on his side and in his defense will doubtless prove effective in discrediting the yellow journalist and the political sensationalist.

Some changes have been made lately in the management and editing of Democratic newspapers in this state. Much importance is attached to the newspaper fraternity, especially along lines of moulding public opinion for or against the organization as now constituted with West Virginia Democrats and it is suspected that is the motive for making the changes. In other words, when a newspaper is not run to suit, have its policy changed, even if the newspaper has to be bought outright. Sometimes there is nothing like suppressing public opinion and crushing a free press.

With Judson Harmon trying to groom himself as a Presidential candidate, he has a very trying time in attempts to keep the Democratic legislature in line. Harmon's advocacy of various measures he deems necessary to get him into the Presidential running have either been defeated or so bitterly opposed that the racing harness lacks all the essential pieces, indeed, almost every strap. Tax reform has not been attained, primary elections have gone by the board, the public utility bill sees its doom, even the governor wavered on the liquor question. There has been nothing accomplished by him or his legislature, and the actual truth is he can not control the Democratic end of the legislature. Failing to carry out his pledges, the legislature has stunned Harmon and it does not appear that he can "come back."

Health Follows the Flag.

Everybody knows that "trade follows the flag." It should be a source of even greater pride to all patriotic citizens that health, too, follows the flag. That is the cheering news from the Philippines, from Panama, from Cuba and Porto Rico and every place where the Stars and Stripes have symbolized the introduction of American civilization. The regeneration of Havana during the American occupation is now an old story. Most persons are familiar with the beneficent results that ensued from the cleaning up of that former fortress of the yellow plague. Uncle Sam banished the disease from Havana and today for the visitor it is one of the safest cities in the world.

Smallpox was the scourge of the Philippine islands under the rule of the Spaniards. The region was swept by epidemics every year and the annual mortality approximated 50,000. While the rebellion of the natives persisted it was impossible for the United States government officials to enforce sanitary measures but upon the subsidence of the insurrection a movement was started to vaccinate every man, woman and child in the Manila province. Later this plan was extended to other provinces. Dr. Victor G. Helser, director of health for the Philippines, now reports that since 1907 the disease has been confined to a few scattering cases and that there has not been a single death among vaccinated persons. During the Spanish regime it was necessary each year in the dry season to erect in Manila a large temporary hospital for the army of smallpox victims. Most of them died. There have been no deaths from smallpox in Manila since June, 1909, and Dr. Helser says it is not too much to hope that the disease will eventually be stamped out. Most persons remember the appalling amount of sickness there was among our soldiers in the Spanish war. (The army authorities have learned a lesson; as shown from the troops now in Texas. Only one in 200 of the soldiers at San Antonio is on the sick list and there are no cases of contagious disease.)

Now comes Charles Frances Adams, of Boston, who has just returned from a visit to Panama, says the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, with the testimony that "the most notorious pest spot on the American continent has been converted into a health resort." He was not so much impressed by "the great engineering features of the canal as by the scientific demonstration that life in the tropics can be made healthful and pleasant." If there are any anti-imperialists left, and it is believed a few vociferous ones still linger in Boston, it would be interesting to have their opinions as to whether, from the viewpoint of service to humanity, it has been worth while for the United States thus to extend its influence in world affairs.

Democratic Dopist.

That fairy story Democratic newspapers are publishing about there being an understanding between Republican politicians of this state and holders of the old debt certificates is purely imaginary and all one has to do is to read it casually to come to that conclusion.

The dopist who got that off evidently was looking more for space than to heralding information or news. He tries to associate certain recent instances and then draws imaginary deductions, in which he actually holds up the governor of this state as being a party to intrigue. All men who know Governor Glascock know that that dopist has done him an unjustifiable injury.

Owing to the fact that some Republican politicians and other members of the party were in conference with the governor last week in reference to party matters and the advisability of an extra session of the legislature, the dopist goes into hallucinations about the activity of old debt certificates on the market. He repeats the statement that it has never been successfully denied that some of the certificates are owned by West Virginia Republicans. Every such Republican whenever accused has denied the charge emphatically and most positively. Men who are even accused are innocent in the eyes of the law until found guilty and the accusers in these instances have not cessantly proved any one guilty. They cannot convict men by making accusations without substantiating them.

Then the dopist criticizes the conduct of the old debt suit at length, even going so far as to tell how the suit should have been brought and trying to attach blame to the Republican state government for not following the outline suggested in the article by him. The fellow is "so crazy as to forget or overlook the fact that Virginia and not West Virginia brought the suit. Let him remember this fact and criticize Virginia, the plaintiff, if he wants to, and not West Virginia, the defendant, for bringing the suit and the manner in which it was brought.

And, at the end of a two column article played up well on the front pages of Democratic newspapers, one finds the real purpose of the hedge-podge of illusions of the dopists, when he conveys the idea that the article is merely in argument against an extra session of the legislature, the idea held out by him being the probability of an extra session has caused a rise in the market value of the certificates, an incident that can in no way affect West Virginia, as judgment against West Virginia, if made and heeded, would not include the increased market value of the certificates as the highest court has already indicated a fixed amount.

The dopist also says that while the state was Democratic the old debt question was not even heard of. The history of the state and the Democratic party show that again he does not know what he is talking about.

It is a real pity that such a dopist should be recognized at all by newspapers professing even a slight degree of intelligence, respectability and integrity of purpose.

ESCAPE

Of Wallace Man from Death
When Horse Runs Away is Miraculous.

WALLACE, April 11.—Quite a serious accident occurred near here Saturday evening when A. C. Kunkle, of Big Rock Camp, superintendent for N. Goff, was riding horseback along the railroad. As he was coming through the narrows at Erving siding about half way between here and Brown, a freight train came along. As the engine passed by his horse, which has always been trusty along the railroad, it became frightened and started to run with him in the same direction the train was running. The horse ran a short distance along side the fast moving train which was a double-header, when Mr. Kunkle seeing that it had become uncontrollable and was near a deep cut, he proceeded to get off in some way. The exact way he dismounted was a little hard to explain, but the frightened horse kept up its speed and ran alongside the moving train for about one-fourth of a mile, and from what could be seen the horse was gaining speed on the train, until he reached the railroad bridge near J. L. Davison's store, which bridge spans the county road and creek together. There the horse plunged off the high fill into the road, a distance of about twenty-five feet, and was killed instantly.

Mr. Kunkle was not seriously hurt, although he sustained some severe bruises from the fall from the horse. But it was a very close call for him to jump from the horse's back while it was going at such a speed alongside a fast moving train so near a deep cut where there was only room to operate a train through, but it still looked very dangerous for him to stick to the horse, when it became uncontrollable. The horse killed was a valuable one, no doubt worth $175.

ENTIRELY BALD

Her Hair Commenced to Grow
After Two Weeks' Use of Newbro's Herpicide.

"Fever caused me to be entirely bald. I had given up all hope of again having hair when I was advised to use Herpicide. After two weeks my hair commenced to grow. I now have the most beautiful head of hair anyone ever saw. Praise to Newbro's Herpicide."

Thus writes Mrs. Howard Bailey, of Bellevue, Mich. We can point to thousands of instances where the proper use of Herpicide has been followed by a remarkable growth of hair.

Newbro's Herpicide is the original remedy which kills the dandruff germ and stops falling hair.

WHAT YOU OUGHT TO DO

If your rheumatism has resisted all other treatment, or if you think you are incurable or chronic, and if you have just about given up hope of even being cured, I especially urge you not to give up hope until you have tried Martin's Rheumatic and Blood Elixir. Mrs. A. O. Quinn, photographer, 326 Fifth street, Parkersburg, W. Va., says: "T. J. Martin, Dear Sir:—Four years ago I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in my shoulders and back. I got no benefit at all from the many different treatments that were prescribed for me. About two years ago my attention was called to Martin's Rheumatic and Blood Elixir, and I can say in all truth that I consider this medicine the leading remedy of the present age for Rheumatism."

Martin's Rheumatic & Blood Elixir is a purely vegetable preparation. It has reached some of the most difficult cases of Rheumatism, Liver, Kidney, and Stomach troubles that have been known in this section. It is for sale by druggists and dealers. Price $1.00 a bottle. Horner-Gaylord Co., wholesale distributors.

T. J. MARTIN, Sole Manufacturer.

When buying a cough medicine for children bear in mind that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is most effective for colds, croup and whooping cough and that it contains no harmful drug. For sale by all dealers.

Style, Quality and Value

In women's apparel is a rare combination and one that cannot be beat, yet these three essentials characterize every garment in our entire establishment and constitute our idea of doing business, though we push that idea a little higher and give

Not Only Style, But the Best Style

Not Only Quality, But the Best Quality

Not Only Value, But the Best Value

All this is of no moment, however, unless we can prove it, as STYLE, QUALITY, and VALUE are, in themselves, largely matters of opinion. We believe the growth of our business is proof that our statement is in accord with the opinions of a great percentage of the fashionable Clarksburg women, whose patronage has earned for us the distinction of
